

The Work Goes On

Sunshine and volunteers who never seemed to grow weary were a double blessing yesterday for the Bay Area in its dilemma of oil-coated waters.

While Standard Oil refinery men aboard a motor barge (at left) used long poles to skim oil-soaked straw from the bay off Crissy Field, young volunteers like Marion and Diane Elliott (at right) tenderly washed oil-fouled birds at Harmon Hall in the Presidio.

—Examiner Photos

See Stories Below and on Page A-5

