

A Buoyant Memorial

An imaginative memorial to the wildlife killed by the oil slick from last week's tanker collision was constructed and flung into the sky above Golden Gate Park's Music Concourse yesterday. It was the brainchild of sculptor

Gene Thompson (in black with back to camera in foreground), who, aided by dozens of young people, strung together hundreds of black balloons with purple streamers to release into the bright afternoon.